Hennie Botes, CEO and founder of the Moladi Construction Systems, is a keen investor, entrepreneur and born philanthropist. As the designer of a multi award winning affordable housing technology, he has gained more than 27 years of experience in the building industry. Having travelled extensively, Mr Botes has a broad based understanding of the challenges that face affordable housing throughout the world and has unique insight into how business and governments can work together to eradicate the global housing shortage. In addition to driving the success of the Moladi technology, Hennie continues to provide consulting services to governments, advisers and institutions internationally. In recognition of his efforts and contribution to the global housing sector, Hennie was awarded South Africa’s Science and Technology’s Man of the Year in 2009 by Men’s Health Magazine.
